About Our Speaker
Dr. Jane Fleishman

Jane Fleishman started working in the area of sexuality education as a second career when she retired from a very successful three decades in the public sector as an organizational development and training consultant to a large mental health system. For her second career, she wanted to make one more difference in the world. She didn't want to sit back and wait. She's on a mission to promote sexual well-being to older adults living on their own or in senior communities.

Jane Fleishman, PhD, MEd, MS, AASECT Certified Sexuality Educator, is an award-winning educator, writer, program developer, and sexuality researcher. She hosts a regular podcast on sex in the second half of life at www.ourbetterhalf.net and recently completed a TEDx talk, Is It OK for Grandma to Have Sex? She holds a PhD and MEd in Human Sexuality from the Widener University Center for Human Sexuality Studies. She is a proud Jewish mother of two amazing twenty-something's and lives in Northampton, MA.
